Bio

Dan is a litigator who represents property owners in construction and insurance recovery litigation. He has represented the interests of thousands of homeowners through their community associations and has participated in the recovery of tens-of-millions of dollars for damages incurred from defective construction. Dan also represents owners of multifamily and commercial buildings, including apartments, malls, and shopping centers.

In his litigation practice, Dan focuses on residential and commercial construction litigation resulting from design, construction, and product liability claims. He has participated as primary counsel in numerous multi-million dollar construction defect cases, including residential, multifamily and commercial buildings. His cases have included virtually all types of construction and have related to defects in building components ranging from siding and windows to plumbing and mechanical systems.

In addition to his construction defect experience, Dan has litigated payment and performance disputes (including construction lien), product liability, design professional, and insurance recovery claims. He also has experience in a variety of commercial and real estate disputes. His early experience as a bankruptcy litigator provides valuable insight in claims brought against defunct developers, contractors and other businesses.

In addition to his litigation focus, Dan serves as general counsel for community associations, often for former litigation clients who have come to rely on his advice. As general counsel, he advises regarding the interpretation, compliance, and amendment of governing documents; risk management and insurance; operating budgets and reserves; vendor selection and contract review; dispute resolution; collections; and, other general advice.

Dan is a member of the Litigation and Tort and Insurance Sections of the American Bar Association, and the Construction Law Sections of the Oregon and Washington State Bars. He is active in the Oregon, Washington, and Central Florida chapters of Community Association Institute (CAI) and Oregon Washington Community Association Managers (OWCAM). Dan was recognized by his peers in Oregon Super Lawyers as a "Rising Star" in Construction Litigation in 2011. He is a frequent speaker on a variety of matters affecting homeowners, homeowners' associations and community managers.
